Keywords

Third, go to the countryside, activity skills, social practice.

1. Background

However, with the continuous development of the program, it can be seen that, with the continuous development of the program, many students in rural areas have achieved remarkable results. In order to promote the sustainable development of College Students' volunteer service, we should avoid simple activities, increase education content, and emphasize the use of incentive measures. Some colleges and universities have difficulties in self-development. During the summer vacation, the speed of college students participating in volunteer activities is still very slow. In the first stage, there is insufficient experience in carrying out volunteer activities, and in the later stage, it fails to keep pace with the pace of national unity, which leads to a little sudden action, and can not organize activities that meet local needs according to the actual characteristics of the University. According to the specific situation, this paper will analyze the "small skills" in the social practice of Shandong University of science and technology during the summer vacation of "three to the countryside" in 2020, one of which is the government affairs practice team of poverty alleviation in MANDONG Town, Jiexiang County, Jining City as an example.

2. Preliminary Preparation Stage

(1) Recruit team members according to the activity characteristics

According to the nature of the activity, the team members can be divided into four parts. The manager is responsible for the overall management of the whole activity, with the number of 1-2; the writer is very important in the administrative practice, the number is 2-3, and students from the school's news department can be invited to participate; the photographer is responsible for recording the whole operation, and 1-2 people can be recruited within the whole school, and the number of mobile personnel is 1-2. In order to actively promote the professional construction, the team is equipped with a student majoring in data science and big data technology. In this way, a social practice team composed of 6-11 people is basically formed.

(2) Extensive research

The theme of the activity was determined as precision poverty alleviation survey, and 2-3 reference sites were selected in the database for investigation. During the inspection process, the village appearance was taken as the starting point, especially the poverty situation, poverty alleviation work, the situation of the widowed elderly and left behind children in the village, the current development situation, and which places need help to have a profile understanding, After a week's comparative analysis, our team initially determined that the place of practice was the Poverty Alleviation Office of MANDONG Town, Jiexiang County, Jining City.

(3) Connect with local government

Communicate with the town government where the proposed practice activity is located, and send a letter of support to the town government in the name of the sub Party committee of the secondary college to discuss when, where and how to participate in the symposium, Secretary of the Party committee and director of the Poverty Alleviation Office of the other town attended the meeting. The meeting reported the investigation, sympathy and publicity of the lectures on agriculture and animal husbandry and the work of abandoning children in the 7-day practice activities. At the same time, we had a clear understanding of the poverty situation of the village and the development of poverty alleviation.

3. Positive Development Stage

(1) Discuss with the staff of each village to understand the situation of each village

After arriving at the village, we need to discuss with the cadres of Baocun village and poverty alleviation cadres, and discuss the specific needs in the development of the village around the theme of promoting the development of the village. We will further study the problems existing in the current poverty alleviation work. After several discussions with different village cadres, we will discuss with them, In the end, our team did little publicity on the related industries in Beiwu village, Qiantang village, houtang village and other villages with similar geographical locations, resulting in a small number of consumers and being unable to promote various products of the above villages; the lack of e-commerce platform for online promotion; the introduction of tourism industry involved is relatively simple; there are many problems in planting and breeding technology, and our team will discuss and give each plan.

(2) The arrangement of work summary needs to be carried out at fixed time

This year's practice activities were carried out as usual, and the meeting was held at 8:30 p.m. everyone shared the harvest of the day's visit. The team leader summarized and arranged the work for the next day according to the information of each team. Finally, the writer was responsible for organizing the writing. During the visit, the village committee's small radio was used to meet with the broadcasting station to spread the most beautiful voice, The practice team will publicize the policies related to poverty alleviation in the village radio stations that need to be visited, so that the team members' visit will not appear too sudden, and the communication with the villagers can be more convenient to obtain the information they want.

(3) Combining different resources to meet rural demand

First of all, all the problems were solved through a few days' visit to the village committee, which was based on the problems of the village committee, The website will be linked to multiple promotion to solve the platform problems and other problems together; for the problems existing in the development of agricultural tourism, relevant publicity videos will be produced and publicized through various channels; about the technical problems of planting and breeding, our school's master will be invited to give lectures to make it popular, This paper mainly discusses some methods to prevent infectious diseases before and after poultry diseases. Members of the group thoughtfully taught villagers how to treat poultry and made a document for villagers to prevent and treat various diseases, In order to prevent and deal with various poultry diseases in time, two college students were invited to provide long-term free technical guidance for villagers.

(4) Complete the practical activities and give feedback on the survey results

The time of the activity is limited, so it is a basic task to plan to complete the activity in a limited time. Through the service site, some information can be re provided to the village committee based on data collection, and practical group suggestions can be put forward. The information feedback should be true and reflect the actual needs of villagers. When putting forward suggestions, we should pay attention to methods and methods, In the process of the implementation of the group, we finally put forward three suggestions on industrial development, tourism development and targeted poverty alleviation, and submitted them to the village committee level, especially considering the realization of targeted poverty alleviation, The paper also puts forward some effective suggestions on the traditional communication barriers between the government and the people.

4. Activity Summary Stage

In general, the paper can be divided into three parts: one is the core of the research team

1. The introduction includes the existing problems, problem analysis, research purpose and team composition, as well as the selection of the research location; 2. The research content includes the appearance of the village, the poverty situation, and the implementation of poverty alleviation; 3. The achievements of poverty alleviation, including the integration of agriculture and Tourism, culture and health; 4. The existing problems and solutions in the village, including the existing problems and solutions; 5. 6. Summary and appendix, which can be attached with interview topics to increase the readability of the report.

5. Summary of Comments

It is not easy to organize a high-quality practical activity of "three going to the countryside" for college students. From personnel recruitment to the formation of research report, it is a test for team leaders. The purpose of practical activities is to let students exercise themselves and increase experience in practice, Team leaders need to work for the welfare of the people on the premise of ensuring the safety of team members. It is of great significance to organize high-quality college students' practice activities of "three going to the countryside", which is a rare exercise for college students and a way to integrate into the society. In the activities, different forms can be used to continuously enrich the connotation of practical activities and make the extension of practical activities more specific, So as to promote other volunteer service activities in the mission and form its own system of complex activities.
